

Loss of Response While Being Treated with a JAK Inhibitor: Definition and Other Treatment Options

Time	Question
00:52	What is a loss of response in regards to JAK Inhibitor therapy?
03:59	Are signs of progression or change considered a loss of response?
06:48	Should we be exploring the options of adjusting the dose, adding another agent, or introducing a procedure more in everyday practice as a result of loss of response and acquisition of other problems?
13:46	If you have a patient still benefitting from Ruxolitinib therapy with progressively increasing white blood cell count, how would you approach with the addition of Hydroxyurea? What dose would you typically start with?
15:02	What have you experienced when reintroducing a JAK inhibitor after a patient originally lost their response and was taken off the JAK inhibitor?
18:15	Are there any other options to offer a patient who has lost all response?
21:28	Is there a need or is it even possible to come up with guidelines around what loss of response truly is?